FEBRUARY 2018 NEWSLETTER

Dear Patron,

Many special days occur in February, but here's one I bet you didn't know: February 25th is "Quiet Day". One teacher writing prompt for that day asks kids to list at least 10 activities they could do being completely quiet. When I was still teaching, we found that kids today (and probably adults too) have very little experience with silence. Our world is just so full of noise. Occasionally, when my kindergarteners got extremely wound up and noisy, we would stop and observe a "minute of silence". We would literally stop everything and stare at the clock for a full 60 seconds before anyone could make another sound. It really helped the kids to get themselves back under control. Some of my kids actually appreciated that moment of quiet and would say, "Mrs. Wilson, I think we need a 'minute of silence'" when things got too chaotic (as they often do in a room full of 5 and 6 year olds!). If you are in need of a "minute (or more!) of silence", I recommend picking up books for everyone in the family and turning off all devices in your home for a given period of time so that everyone can get themselves back "under control". (I would say come read at the library, but I am fully aware that the library is often far from silent!) It is amazing how refreshed you will feel after family quiet time. You may even find that family members begin to request a "minute of silence".

Attention Cloud Library Users

We have been purging inactive Rangeley Public Library accounts. If an account shows no activity for several years, it is closed out. However, we have no way of knowing if an account is used for online books. Therefore, if you use your account strictly for reading ebooks through the Cloud Library, it will appear as inactive in our system and be removed. If this happens to you, simply come to the library and sign up for a new account. To prevent this from happening to you in the future, occasionally coming to the library to check out a physical book will show the system that your account is still an active account and you will not have the hassle of having to create a new account. We are sorry if this causes anyone any inconvenience.
